

Addiction Treatment for Women: A Priority

If a woman who is pregnant cannot receive priority admission to treatment and/or interim services within 48 hours, please call the Consumer Service Line 1-800-901-1133 and request assistance from Division of Mental Health and Addiction (DMHA).

Women who suffer from addiction disorders present with unique social and economic barriers to successfully completing treatment. Gender impacts treatment retention, engagement and outcomes. The Division of Mental Health and Addiction (DMHA) is committed to educating the public about the unique treatment needs of women, highlighting gender specific resources available for clinicians, and making women's substance use disorder treatment a top priority.

DMHA wants to ensure that each woman who is pregnant in the State who seeks or is referred for and would benefit from addiction treatment services is given priority admission to treatment providers receiving DMHA funds. In the event that a treatment provider has insufficient capacity to provide treatment services to a pregnant woman, the provider is responsible for referring the woman to a treatment provider that has the capacity to provide treatment services; or will, if no treatment provider has the capacity to admit the woman, make available interim services, including prenatal services and other services necessary to assist in protecting the mother and unborn child.
